It is a wisdom cache of tough life experiences. It is a story of an African child, Julius Babyetsiza, who has seen it all. The book poses a universal question as what is the return on investment in education in UgandaAfrica given that the continent has remained crawling technologically when the rest of the world is running. He sounds an oracle to Ugandas political and university leaders to build knowledge-driven national economy; else History catches them on the wrong side. Woe, however, The falcon cannot hear the falconer. Find his views regarding how to address disheartening graduates unemployment problem in Uganda - letters to Ugandan President and calls to leaders of universities. One of the hallmarks of Destined To Triumph is the suggested new leadership paradigm shift that will enthrone universitiesuniversity leaders as the guardians of political and socio-economic accountability. Striking highlights of his story include: a socially rich life and untimely death and spectacular mourning of the death of his father; his survival of a vicious attack of his leg by mysterious swelling which was...
